

Diane Becker
Communications Director

dbecker@ci.norfolk.ne.us

For Immediate Release: January 20, 2017
“Tree removal first step in library construction/renovation”

City of Norfolk street staff are removing trees around the Norfolk Public Library in preparation for the library construction/renovation that will be starting this spring. Fortunately the trees being removed are ash trees which are threatened by the emerald ash borer that has been found in other parts of the state. The borer has been killing millions of ash trees across the United States. There are plans to replant new trees when the construction is done in 2018.