Latino Youth Summit held in Norfolk
For Immediate Release: September 27, 2017

Dr. Michael Chipps, President of Northeast Community College, gave the opening remarks at Norfolk's first Latino Youth Summit on September 22, 2017.

On September 22, 2017, the Latino Youth Summit was held in Norfolk for the first time. Several junior and senior students from two high schools joined together to embrace diversity and learn about higher education and career opportunities.

The event was sponsored by Northeast Public Power District and hosted by Northeast Community College in Norfolk. The day consisted of three speakers who discussed the challenges the students will face outside of high school and how to overcome the obstacles. It also included a tour of the Northeast Community College campus.

“We thank NPPD and Northeast Community College for sponsoring and hosting this event for the first time in Norfolk. This is an excellent opportunity for area Latino youth to learn more about educational and career opportunities in our region,” said Norfolk Mayor, Josh Moenning.

This was the second year that the Latino Youth Summit was held in Nebraska.
